

ABSTRACT

In one embodiment, a system and a method for verifying lockstep operation pertain to monitoring interface signals, detecting output of a modeled lockstep block, comparing the detected output with an expected output for the lockstep block relative to a current modeled machine state, and flagging a lockstep block error if the detected output does not match the expected output.

5